

Family Fun

Boulder mini-fest caters to kids' inner artist

By Kathleen St. John

Special to The Denver Post

Article Last Updated: 08/15/2008 12:38:54 AM MDT

Among other activities, kids can get their hands on paint at KidsFringe in Boulder.

Friday-Saturday. Saturday. The Boulder International Fringe Festival lets almost any artist have a day in the sun, so this year kid artists get a mini-festival of their own. KidsFringe is a full day of artistic fun for all ages, running Saturday in conjunction with the annual arts fest. Boulder's Central Park will feature art and performances by kids and for kids, plus lots of fun activities. The band shell will cater to teens, in particular, with all sorts of performances by their peers. Games, vendors and workshops will be scattered throughout the park, so show up ready to explore your artistic side. 9 a.m to 6 p.m. Saturday. Boulder Central Park, Broadway and Canyon Boulevard. Free. The Boulder International Fringe Festival runs through Aug. 25.